

The Health(care) of Small Business

A smart, interactive conversation about how healthcare policy impacts local business

Small businesses are the forgotten voices in healthcare policy, despite paying more for health-care benefits and receiving less.

On March 18th, 6 pm, the small businesses community of Portland is invited to the Aladdin Theater for an evening of lively panel discussions and edgy debates. Dr. Adam Gaffney, veteran of a Fox News interview, will entertain as he tries to gracefully fend off tough audience questions about a single-payer healthcare system while a talented moderator will keep the discussion on-track and focused.

Then we open the discussion to our audience to share their views with good humor and to fire tough questions at Dr. Gaffney, President of Physicians for a National Health Program. Check him out in this video and plan your comments.

We might not come up with a solution on how to solve health care for small businesses, but we will certainly leave better equipped to fight for what we need.
